Special article: Wealth Collapse and War

<http://newearthsummit.org/forum/index.php?topic = 959.msg4060;topicseen#msg4060>

Between April 7th and April 9th, energies and indicators were shifting globally. By Thursday April 9th the “destiny track” seemed to solidify toward a greater level of warfare occurring in different parts of the world. This outbreak would most likely be in the last quarter of 2009, although limited outbreaks may well occur sooner. Weeks ago, I had one of those waking visions that included newspaper with the headline “WAR!” in giant letters, just like the newspapers from WW1 and WW2 era. It is interesting to note others dreams and visions concerning warnings of war I have taken special note of HalfPastHuman's latest report on this very topic in which they were getting indicators of November. A few days ago I received an email from someone whose young son reported that there would be global warfare later this year.

This past week events shifted in the ordinary world. I would like to be sending out our article on ascension, but this short article called for my immediate attention. The “other side of the news” will be ready in serial format over the coming weeks.

The longer people allow their attention to be referenced by social, economic, political and other shenanigans of the old human realm, the more distant spiritual evolution/ascension will seem. It is possible to function in the world, yet not be identified with it. Just as it is possible to function from a personality self, yet not make that ones primary or sole identification.

However and whatever ways people find ways to detach from the old, see the truth of the deceits, and be clear about spiritual evolution rather than the survival of their biological vehicles and species, then they will have an easier time establishing a new directional vector that is focused on spiritual evolution and the dream of creation.

Wealth Collapse and War

by Alex Kochkin

This is one of the last commentaries we will be making concerning the severity of and breakdown and collapse of the old ways. Many are already moving into a new level of awareness with an increase in their overall “light quotient”. Over these coming months and few years, all humans will be presented with ongoing opportunities to “upshift” and let go of the old. The more of the old that is let go of, the more complete and more rapid will be the “upshifting” process. Initially it will be confusing to many, so it is best to remember to stay with the larger transformation process and not settle into the first level that offers slight improvement.

When we wrote of the anticipated breakdown of the economic, social and political systems of control, few believed it could come to what is now playing out in daily life and the mass media. For those tightly wound up over disasters and the end of the world, naturally any dire pronouncement would simply feed into that perspective. Most however were in denial because they could not imagine things getting “that bad” and crashing so quickly. In the USA as in most modern consumer societies, the stores were well enough stocked and hyperinflation was not a concern and the electricity grids and Internet were up and running.

Now more people are aware but curiously, still in general denial that material life could become worse than what is evoked by stories of the Great Depression of the 1930’s. It is more than possible and it is most likely. The situation is even worse given the lack of useful practical skills and the lack of local productive capacity to support material life.

As a simple measure, the value in US dollars of what is estimated to have been stolen, expended on war, and legally handed out to the highest levels of corporate owners from the USA alone is approximately 6 trillion dollars or $50,000 for every household in the USA. And that is only cover the most recent decade or so.

One estimation of artificially constructed, finance-based wealth is $1.6 quadrillion US dollars. This translates to nearly $1,000,000 per household globally, based on 1.6 billion households. These numbers are not only staggering to the imagination, they represent an “enumeration of surreality”!

That is $1.6 quadrillion at the top of this inverted pyramid that provides a high-level perspective of an accounting of global economic wealth value. One quadrillion is one million billion, as if that is any help.

This “wealth” is all based upon high level “boasting agreements” as the current value of wealth. While those at the top of the food chain may lose half of the measure of their wealth or more, they still have many millions or billions. In most countries, people working for paycheck are one to two months from financial default.

Surreality can be better explained as the lies that are at the basis of how humans have been taught to define their lives. From simple accumulation and family accumulation multiplied by many strong healthy children, to “data pushers” in office complexes, the “value” and meaning of life for the vast majority of humanity has been and is based upon lies and falsehoods promoted by faceless and deeply corrupt individuals. These individuals constitute the powers that be and their top layers of minions who are mostly organized through soulless corporate entities that have reserved the privilege of vacuuming all available wealth for distribution to a small number of owners.

Imagine the wealth of the world is based upon high level “gentlemen’s agreements and outright betting. Actual wealth is based upon the labor time required to produce and distribute it to the user. This value is further enhanced by utilitarian value. These basic values become inflated or otherwise “enhanced” by psychological factors such as greed or desire and eventually market manipulations.

So the question comes down to how people can exchange their time and abilities in as respectfully equal a manner as possible. There is no divine edict that supports the private ownership of a portion of the planet for private gain and there is no divine edict that supports the accumulation of wealth and its concentration into the hands of a small number at the expense of a large number of people.

The next level of this mass looting of all of humanity’s measurable economic wealth is about to begin. The result will be the extensive impoverishment of a majority of humanity. Presently, the actual USA unemployment rate is around 20% within 12 months this could exceed 50% unemployment in the USA alone and the popular stock indexes could be 25% to 50% of their present levels, further deleting numerical wealth. The level of consequential social conflict can only be distracted by natural disasters of large proportion and by formal engagement of international war at an increased level of engagements.

The level of catastrophic breakdown is barely underway. In contemporary history, this feeds into war preparations and the use of destructive means to rapidly diminish and redistribute human and material infrastructure and global power centers. This is where human events are leading this year and on. The human and other dark forces that manipulate world wars and other major wars have not stopped their actions.

As of the week of April 7th, humanity was moved one notch closer to escalation of international wars. The material world indicators included a concatenation of cultural, national, religious, economic, and ethnic factors.

Presently there are enough humans at various levels of influence who are bent upon a restructuring of global civilization under their near singular control that the only question is the extent and duration of such war, not a matter of “if” it is to happen.

The mention of such conflicts typically evokes images of the end of the world. But we would remind readers that roughly 200 million people died in the past century in human warfare. In 1900 there were roughly 1.7 billion humans resident, in 1950, 2.5 billion. Using a mid-point of 2.1 billion, it can be seen that roughly ten percent of the world’s population died directly from war. The consequential effects from injuries, disease, demographic imbalances, and environmental destruction dramatically add to these death statistics. Yet ways were found to make this all acceptable and eventually forgotten by enough humans so that they could go on with the various concerns of their lives.

So major global war that involves both the use of high-tech energy weapons as well as human operated mechanized and infantry is not only possible, but has been a part of “modern” civilization for the last hundred or so years.

Nuclear weapons have been exploded in the thousands for testing and other purposes, and tons of depleted uranium atomized into the air, soil and water worldwide. Although human and biospheric health continues to decline along with the mental acuity of humanity, people go on, for the most part unconsciously, as they do.

While a true global-scale war is not likely for this year or next, the likelihood is very, very high of significant escalations of many areas of new and old conflicts. These are likely to bring about significant death and injury of both military people and the civil populations. The aftermath of such escalations will affect people severely for a considerable period of time, possibly due to disease and injuries from biological or nuclear effects, as well as ongoing poisoning of the physical environment.

As the matrix world unravels, there will be those who seek ways to maintain what they are most familiar with and will even fight others to maintain their unconscious addiction. There will be those who will be upset and angered and who will seek retribution and ways to hasten the end of the old world in favor of what, they will know not. There will be those who will begin new ways of cooperation with one another and the planet.

Largely outside of this sphere of dynamics, there will be those who will choose to connect with their true nature as spiritual beings and engage with spiritual evolution, mindful of the lessons of the old. Some of these will become bridges between the new earth, a new world, and those from the old who are most open to making a dramatic shift in their existence.

All will be affected by the energies and intent of creation to heal and correct itself from the influences.
